PROWSE FLIES IN HIS AIRSHIP

First Test a Success and Trial Trip Is Made.

IS BROKEN ALIGHTING.

Judge Charles O. Prowse
Believes He Has Problem
Solved.

Former County Judge Chas. O. Prowse, Tuesday morning made the first test of his newly invented airship, on the Phelps farm. The test was highly successful, although in alighting the support on one wheel was broken. The motor has not yet been installed on the monoplane and was hitched behind Councilman E. H. Higgins' automobile to get the necessary momentum.

With Judge Prowse in the operator's seat the airship rose gracefully and sailed steadily and evenly and with very little pull on the automobile. The inventor says it fulfilled every expectation.

He will install a motor as soon as it is received from the factory and will then make the final test of the airship. Judge Prowse claims he has perfected an automatic balancing device in his machine that is entirely new and will solve the great trouble in aerial navigation.

In rising the machine cleared the ground four or five feet, but was kept close to the ground.

The machine will be repaired and other tests made, after which a real flight will be attempted.

Judge Prowse's invention is one in which Hopkinsville feels pride and interest. His machine was constructed in this city and it is altogether a home enterprise.

This puts Hopkinsville in the rank with Paris, New York and other large cities that are solving the problem of aviation.

The machine has a spread of 225 square feet of canvas, with a lifting power of six pounds to the foot.
